The initial consultation does not create an attorney-client relationship. This initial conference is meant as an educational process for the person appearing for the consultation so that he/she may obtain a general understanding of the issues he/she is facing and the costs that may be involved. This conference gives the attorney the opportunity to meet with the person seeking the consultation and to determine whether this office will accept the case. Specific strategies and litigation plans will not be discussed at the initial consultation. The attorney will not review this form at the consultation and will not give any instruction as to how to complete the form during the consultation. However, your preparation of this form will prepare you for your initial consultation with the firm so that your consultation is productive and educational for you.

THE CONSULTATION DOES NOT CREATE AN ATTORNEY-CLIENT RELATIONSHIP.

Upon being retained, however, this office will receive and review this form, and we will provide additional documentation for completion, as deemed necessary on a case by case basis.
